SHOULD insane criminals be punished is now the question of fruitful discussion in the press. If the criminal is a crank with no more mental aberration than Giteau shows, he should be hung, is the general verdict.

SOME towns and cities have an ever-lasting boom. They grow steadily and constantly without any particular reason for it. They have general ground and far-reaching resources. Such a town is Las Vegas. It has never had any particular thing to give it a hasty boom of mushroom growth, to spring up in a day and die down in a night. The railroad did not stop here for any length of time when building through the Territory. It received no especial benefit from being the terminus of the railroad for a short period. On the contrary it gained by the railroad being pushed to the rich valley of the Rio Grande and the mining regions of the southwest.

It opened to our merchants vast and wealthy regions which before contributed but little trade to the town. It brought the Rio Grande Valley, the rich mining regions of the mountains along its length, the mines of Grant County and of Arizona and Chihuahua to our doors as purchasers. Where Las Vegas merchants formerly sold dollars worth of goods in these sections, they now sell thousands of dollars worth. It brings southern New Mexico to as easy reach of our trade as is Northern New Mexico. This accounts for the continuous boom of Las Vegas. The striking advantage of position has called here the most energetic and thorough-going class of business men which come to the Territory. They study the situation and fix upon this as the strategic point from which to transact business throughout the length and breadth of the Territory. This accounts for the enterprise of her people and the steady boom which she enjoys. Las Vegas is the Chicago of the Southwest in relation to the push and energy of her people.

Building never lets up. The more houses that are finished, the more are projected. It grows on forever, as Denver is growing, as Chicago, New York and London grow, because position supplies a vast empire of resources.

The Denver papers are still discussing the question of the D. & N. O. railroad and where it shall run. It was originally designed to run on a bee line between Denver and New Orleans. It is a Denver enterprise, and by the road striking Denver first of all towns along the Rocky Mountains it was supposed that Denver would then become the general depot for all the traffic which would seek a cheap outlet by the Gulf road. For this reason the Tribune bitterly opposed the road going to Pueblo. Should the road go straight from the latter point across the plains it would enjoy equally the advantages intended a line for Denver. The road will be built to Pueblo, however, and now the question is shall it be extended still farther down the mountains to Trinidad. A wise policy will build the road not only to Trinidad but to Las Vegas. If Denver can string a number of healthy and growing towns on her through route to the Gulf she will reap great advantages. That town is aspiring to commercial supremacy in the mountains. To control the business of a region she must have allroad to do it, and not only that, but it must be a road that can go squarely into a fight for low rates of freight with Eastern lines. If Las Vegas can get goods cheaper from Denver than from Kansas City there is where the goods will be bought. Denver must have a road to New Mexico which can carry freight cheaper than the roads from the East if New Mexico trade is desired. The Denver & Rio Grande road depends on local traffic alone for its support. It must, therefore, have good freight rates and would not be a competing line. It is otherwise with the Denver & New Orleans. Built by way of Las Vegas to Fort Worth it would rely largely for support on through traffic from the Gulf. The local traffic could be done cheaply. It could land goods in Las Vegas from Denver cheaper than Eastern roads could from Kansas City. It would give Denver a tremendous advantage as a purchasing point for all local centers along the line. But should it go on a bee line across the unproductive plains it will neither be a paying road, or of great advantage to Denver.

A Black List.
 From the Alta California.
 While we are considering the relations of education to crime, it is worth while to read over the following list of mammoth defalcations during the past seven or eight years. Carlston, of the Union Trust company, stole $400,000; 1 helps, of the Treasury department at Albany, $300,000; E. D. Winslow, Boston preacher, lecturer, treasurer, $600,000; David Gage, treasurer, Chicago, $500,000; Warwell, bank cashier, Providence, $20,000; Abraham Jackson, lawyer, trustee, etc., Boston; $200,000; John C. Tracy, bank president, Hartford, $800,000; John S. Morton, Philadelphia, $1,000,000; Henry Nicoll, lawyer, New York, $200,000; G. Van Hollen, collector taxes, Chicago, $150,000; Oscar L. Baldwin, $2,600,000. This is only a partial list. Many defalcations, smaller in amount, are omitted, and some of the heavier ones, also. Each of the eleven men named above was well educated and of high social position, and most of them were conspicuous in the churches. It is not only the hoodlum and the uneducated boy who steals and goes to prison. The biggest thieves are those who have "stepped high in the community." The prison commission are respectfully tendered the question for consideration.

"An Ode to Las Vegas."

BY JOHN A. MORRIS.
 Ye masses here, with me combine,
 And sing my ode to you.
 To write this ode in lyric lays
 Of scenes which my heart thrill.
 The verdant scene mid valleys green,
 Which nature decked so rare,
 Not Italy's plains or grove of Spain
 With Las Vegas could compare.
 Had I the power of Pope or Moore
 Your praise I'd immortalize,
 My inspired quill would volume till
 Of your endless praise.
 I would raise thy name to endless fame,
 And bands would there adore.
 For such beauties sweet they could not meet
 Except on Las Vegas' shore.
 Ye birds of song that daily throng
 The bowers that skirt those banks,
 Where free from care, sorrow or fear,
 You tune your grateful thanks.
 May your song enliven long
 Each verdant scene mid glade,
 For the world has not a fairer spot
 Than Las Vegas' golden shade.
 LAS VEGAS, Dec. 5, 1891.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC.
 Progress of the Construction of the Road.

Andrew Onderdonk, to whom the contract for building the western end of the Canadian Pacific Transcontinental Railroad was awarded, returned to this city a few days ago from the west. The length of road required to be built under the contract is 125 miles. The route offers very serious obstacles, in so far as speed of progress is concerned, on account of the high precipices which have to be crossed and the general rocky nature of the country, requiring for the greater portion to be shelled and galloped. About 60 miles of the line have been graded and at least 20 miles ironed. The cost of constructing a mile is $100,000. The force of white laborers at present employed in the work numbers about 1,500, with a like number of Chinese. This will be increased in the spring to 10,000 men. The white excavators $2 a day, the Chinese being paid half that amount. Along the road stores have been opened, where the provisions and clothing needed by the laborers can be obtained. Boarding houses have also been opened, at which white men are charged $15 a month and Chinese $10. The explosives are manufactured at the scene of operations, all other supplies being received from this city, England or Canada. The contract price for building the section of the road for which Mr. Onderdonk is the contractor is $10,000,000. He expects to complete his contract in about three years. The road, though originally inaugurated by the Dominion Government, has been recently turned over to the Syndicate. The entire distance is 4,500 miles, and the road, when completed, will be the longest unbroken line in the world. It will be completed in 1896, at a cost of $80,000,000. An effort will then be made to control the Oriental trade, and with this end in view a line of steamers will be placed on the Pacific, with the probability of another to Australia.
